

Declaration of possible Conflicts of Interest:

As experts in ADHD, some of the WP-leaders and/or site investigators are or have been involved in the recent past in giving advice to companies that invest in the search for new treatments for the disorder. Some receive(d) royalties for book chapters they have written on ADHD. Some have conducted trials with treatments that were still under development. None of them, however, are or have been shareholders in these companies or own patents. Activities such as the above may be seen as conflicts of interest and therefore are openly declared here. However, all investigators in the ADDUCE project regard themselves as independent researchers and thinkers.
